

Predicting The Past

22 August 2022

Q: Esteemed Committee, you supplied the title for this post and will want to ask the questions, or will y'all simply "speak" if & as you prefer?

C: Readers can ask questions afterwards, of course and as always. If you a reader seeing these words wish to do this, please direct your questions to us directly.

We speak to the past, as humans understand this.

Many a time have we explained Earth surface time, all know this well. What we wish to say is that the past is as mutable, changeable and varied for what humans call the future.

The perception difference is, what any one human or group of humans remembers as the past, only applies to that one person or voluntary group of them.

You are not a human, you are living the role as one, which means a life course in a body. The body is subject to time and all factors of the Earth surface environment, but you are not.

Too many humans, nearly the entirety of you all, are falsely but most sincerely encouraged to gaze upon things outside your physical senses & reach, as if those things are separate, distinct and different. In reality, the gazing is from yourself at & into your Earth surface journey.

Your past is your future, your future is your past. These are but two of many ways to look upon what you really are, the now. You exist only in the present moment.

The planet upon which you find the body you occupy, rotates and revolves. It creates steadily changing angles of light continuously, thus time is created.

You are not part of this effect before your body is born and you are not part of it after you are un-born, or your body dies, as humans prefer to say.

Because you are not a component of Earth's rotation and its revolutions about the central star –what you call the sun– you are not a part of time. It only looks that way.

As easily as any one of you might methodically trace your memories back to your birth, given sufficient notes, video, audio and still photographs, so can you trace forward the future. You might likely say many future paths are available, that human free will allows choice among them. This is absolutely true.

So does choice allow you many pasts; simply rotate your past one hundred eighty degrees.

Approach Earth so that Antarctica appears directly ahead. It is neither north nor south, neither down nor up. Humans will argue that the axis of rotation, thus the poles, determine this. This correct from the surface but from outer space, the poles are meaningless as to what is up or down.

Likewise, the past is only behind you because of the calendar. The calendar only exists because of the sunlight's angle. You created neither, control neither and are not a required component.

Every time you decide to change your future –which is a redundant phrase, because your future is created even by choosing not to choose, itself a decision— your past changes also.

This means your vote for the Demublican candidate in the USA's presidential political contests creates a Republicrat president in the past. Your past.

The past and the future are well depicted by the wheel of a bicycle, specifically its spokes. It turns always. It can turn one way or the other; you decide. You can move along the spokes starting from the outside rim moving towards the center hub, or begin from the hub and go outwards.

You will argue that the spokes are fixed in place, thus events aligned along the shaft of the spoke, are fixed. Yes, that is true, so we shall introduce another aspect and angle to this example.

Your existence is not flat; the plane of the wheel is but one of an infinite number of them in the sphere they create. If the spoke becomes full, it is easy to extend the spoke outward to infinity. As you know, one degree of angle close to the center of a circle grows ever larger as the outer circle grows, the circumference increases. One of three hundred sixty degrees of angle it can be small or very large. Infinitely large, or infinitely small.

As a sequence of events—deemed future or past—are examined, they connect to all parts of the sphere in which they are created, including all planes or bicycle wheels which form the sphere.

If a person breaks an ongoing pattern of behavior which results from past events, that past is changed. The human switches wheels and spokes, s/he writes a new sequence of events along a different spoke.

Your life plan and agreement are your past. You write them to unfold always as what has already happened. Tomorrow's sunrise tricks you to believe that your future is yet to be chosen, yet to happen and yet to occur, but in reality, it has already occurred but for your approach and arrival.

In this way you change your future, because you change your past. The power to alter the one, alters the other.

The challenge and opportunity human incarnation presents, is to tolerate the perceived slowness with which the changes seem to happen. Why must a person pass through weeks and months of a diet or an exercise regime, to reach weight or strength goals desired? This is the human body circumstance chosen, the relatively slow manifestation of change which, along a spoke of a wheel among the growing millions of wheels in & of your sphere of existence, has already occurred instantly.

Great knowledge, understanding and insight into your soul come from this process, the reason you designed then undertook this journey. You have already read these words. Do you remember? Do you recognize the spoke where they're written down?

Be well one and all, do return.